Tulsa Is Experiencing Her Greatest Growth

Tulsa is growing faster now than ever before in its history. This statement is made by local business men who have lived here many years and who have watched the city's progress closely. It is made by visitors who come here periodically and who cannot help but observe the city's physical progress as it presents a changed view with each succeeding year.

If one were reluctant to accept these statements, which of course are based on observation, he might scan the record of building permits, of postoffice receipts and of bank clearings. Those figures silently tell a graphic story that convinces even the most ardent doubter.

The month of October broke all monthly building records up to that time. It was considered an outstanding record, because there had been several mammoth building months previously. Then along came November. It already has smashed October's record and is still going strong. That it will leave October's total far behind is certain, for the difference is now wide and there are several more days in November in which permits may be written.

That is one of Tulsa's characteristics that amazes even those who live here. Records are made here only to exist over night. The unusual one day becomes the common-place on the succeeding day. Tulsa almost refuse to become enthusiastic over the breaking of a record for they know the new record will be short-lived.

Another Tulsa accomplishment is the completion Saturday of 104 miles of concrete highways, linking together all towns in the county with Tulsa and consequently with each other, and placing a city street in front of hundreds of farmers' doors. Tulsa is now within 10 minutes of any point in the county. What a few years ago was an hour's drive is now a short trip of 10 minutes.

"Greater Tulsa" has become a reality with the building of these roads. Its borders in the county line. All communities in the county are brought together by modern highways that are like city pavements.

The good roads program is not finished. Several miles will be added to those so far completed. But they will only widen the borders of Greater Tulsa and strengthen the links already completed.

Business Notes

The Apple Crop.
The United States commercial apple crop is placed at 31,901,000 barrels, against last year's short crop of 20,958,000, but falls below the 1920 crop of 24,500,000, according to the agricultural department. The United States box apple crop is somewhat less than last year, but much larger than it was in 1920, while the barrel apple crop this year is much larger than in 1921. Box apples of the northwest are reported lower in quality than usual because of worms. New York's apple crop is a little more than double last year's crop, but less than it was in 1920, and the percentage of winter apples is said to be smaller than usual.

Paper Trade Activity.
Paper production for 1922 will, to judge from the figures available for the first seven months of the year, be about normal, according to the American Paper & Pulp Assn. The newspapers of the country, on the basis of present figures, will use 13 per cent more newsprint this year than in 1920, the previous high record year of history. The production of book paper in August was nearly 86,000 tons, as against less than 57,000 tons in August of 1921, and the increase over July, 1922, was more than 13,000 tons. Writing paper production for the first eight months of 1922 was about equal to the entire production of 1921.

New York State Employment.
Every group of manufacturing industries in New York state added to the number of its employees between September and October, except the food products industries, where seasonal reductions were to be expected, according to the New York state department of labor. About 3 per cent more workers were employed in all the manufacturing industries combined. In the iron and steel mills, the increase in the number of workers was almost 10 per cent. In the railway equipment factories and the railway repair shops, the increased activity and the settlement of the strike in some shops caused an increase of 30 per cent in a month. The only setback in industrial conditions was in the sugar refineries, where the usual seasonal reduction was intensified by the closing of some refineries, the price situation being given as the reason.

Recent Legal Decisions

(Prepared for Bradstreet's)
State Power—Compulsory Vaccination.

The supreme court of the United States held, in the case of Zucht v. King et al., that the state of Texas could not only impose compulsory vaccination on residents therein, but could delegate to a municipality power to determine regulations under which vaccination could be carried out.

Corporations, Taxation, Discrimination, Domicile Before Statehood.

Before Oklahoma became a state, a foreign corporation entered into the territory of Oklahoma, did business there, and constructed pipeline and other apparatus of a permanent nature. After Oklahoma became a state, the legislature there passed laws regulating the taxation of corporations which provided for a different rate of taxation for foreign corporations as compared with domestic corporations of the class to which the corporation first mentioned belonged. The United States circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit held, in the case of Lecroft vs. Texas company, that the state of Oklahoma having permitted the corporation referred to to continue to do business and to invest further money in property within the state after the latter had been admitted in the union as a state, could not thereafter discriminate between the foreign corporation mentioned and domestic corporations in its tax laws.

Foreign Corporation, "Doing Business," Service of Process.

A railroad corporation organized in another state (Delaware) had an agent in the state of New York for the solicitation of freight and passenger business. Its entire stock was owned by a holding company which had its principal place of business in New York, of which the majority of the members of the executive committee were residents. This corporation mentioned at stated meetings while the board of directors was not in session to pass resolutions conferring upon the officers power to transact the business of the corporation, but did not itself transact such business. Judge Augustus N. Hand of the United States district court for the southern district of New York held, in the case of Endicott-Johnson corporation vs. Western Pacific Railroad company, that the transactions of the first mentioned corporation in New York had been so substantial a part of the business for which it was incorporated as to subject it to service of process as a corporation engaged in business in New York.
